2011 was an excellent year for the Lisa E Moss label, and saw pieces featured on numerous celebrities and brilliant TV shows. Actress Gemma Arterton wore a beautiful gold key necklace for the short film 'Astonish Me' in aid of the World Wildlife Fund. Presenter Fearne Cotton wore Lisa E Moss to host BBC's Children In Need and Cosmopolitan's Ultimate Women Awards. Fearne was also spotted out and about wearing her Lisa E Moss bracelet. The ladies of ITV's Loose Women wore Lisa E Moss jewellery. Supermodel Jacquetta Wheeler was spotted at Glastonbury and in the front row at Matthew Williamson during London Fashion Week wearing Lisa E Moss. Actress Lesley Sharp wore pieces on ITV's This Morning, at the BAFTAs, The Monte Carlo Television Awards, and also the Evening Standard British Film Awards. Lisa E Moss jewellery was also featured in Quintessentially Magazine's Gifted section in the 10th anniversary special edition and in their Luxe List in a later edition.

2011 ROUNDUP

2011 began with a full page glossy advert in Quintessentially Magazine's 10th Anniversary special edition. We released the Twenty8Twelve Spring/Summer 2011 collection, the Frida Kahlo inspired 'I Paint Flowers', and also launched the 'Precious Things' collection from the Lisa E Moss own label. To accompany the jewellery we arranged a fantastic ballet movie shoot with ex-Royal Ballet dancers who danced to the Tori Amos tune 'Precious Things'. We launched the collection at the Dulwich Festival to a great response. Autumn/Winter 2012 saw the launch of the next Twenty8Twelve collection 'Dancing the Javanese', which drew inspiration from the beatniks, 60s French cinema and Serge Gainsbourg. The Autumn/Winter 2012 collection from the Lisa E Moss own label was a progression from the Spring/Summer collection and was titled 'Precious Things: The Final Frame'.
